Image Doctor 2.1.1.1116 Revision 22763. Displays the original and modified images side-by-side and enables you to easily select which image you wish to retain. You can also reverse the selection, if necessary. In addition, it can find duplicates of the object, remove them, and replace them with the original. A new tutorial is included that demonstrates how to use the plug-in. In this tutorial, I show you how to make a super-sharp eyed squinty eye, with a similar effect to the one on the below advert. What you need: A: A solid base colour on your image, that is the colours you wish to use for the eye. B: A watermark. You can find watermark resources in our library. F: Photoshop. Create a new file. This can be a new image, or you can paste your base colours into the image. Select both your base colours and paste them into the image. C: Create a new layer called "Eye" and paste in your base colour, as shown above. Create a new layer called "Eye Mask". Make sure this is below your eye layer. D: Make your eye layer 100% opaque. If you've made this a. PSD file, then you should be able to do this by selecting your eye layer, then pressing the Opacity key on your keyboard, F8, Alt + F8. E: Make the eye layer only half black, so it's not 100% opaque. Alternatively, you can change the opacity setting of the eye layer. F: Create a new layer called "Background". Paste in a good light-coloured background, with something in the background that is similar to your base colour, as shown above. G: Select the eye layer and then select the "Curves" tool, F1. Click on "Curves" and click on 82157476af
